SceneDeal shares The End. A New Beginning. with four subtitle editions

The 60-second brand film is available as a Korean original and in English, Vietnamese, Simplified Chinese and Japanese subtitle editions.

SceneDeal has published its 60-second brand film, The End. A New Beginning., in the website's PR room. The film presents the completion of a story as the start of its next chapter, bringing together the perspectives of a creator seeking a new market and a buyer searching for new content.

The narrative moves between a creator's editing space and a buyer's workplace. By connecting two people considering the potential of a work, the film expresses SceneDeal's role as a meeting place for content and partners. Its central message is: The next market for your content.

The release includes the Korean original and versions with English, Vietnamese, Simplified Chinese and Japanese subtitles. Translated captions are embedded in each video. The Korean voice track and music remain, as do the original Korean interface text and campaign copy shown within the scenes. These are subtitled editions, not newly dubbed versions.

All five editions run for 60 seconds and are provided at 1920 by 1080 resolution. Visitors can select a language card in the Advertising category or change the edition on the film's detail page. The same page provides video playback and file downloads.

The film is part of SceneDeal's growing collection of materials explaining its service and brand. Visitors can explore the PR room alongside the marketplace's work listings, production company information and project opportunities. The film is an advertisement expressing the process of connection, not a reconstruction of a completed transaction.
